Each year, Chicago Jobs Council's \(CJC's\) Annual Meeting Celebration features a robust discussion about a pertinent topic within the workforce development field. This year, we are excited to be joined by the following workforce development leaders in a discussion titled, What's New and What's Normal for Workforce Development:

- Carrie Felton is committed to advancing equitable pathways to good jobs for people who have been left out and left behind by the labor market. As Director of Worker Success at the National Fund for Workforce Solutions, she leads efforts to ensure training institutions and workforce systems offer human-centered, equitable pathways to good jobs and that job seekers and workers can use their voice and power to drive career decisions and influence systems and workplaces.

- Daniel Serota is the Vice President of Government and Public Affairs at Aon. Daniel's responsibilities include leading U.S. public policy and political initiatives for Aon at the federal, state, and regulatory level. He is also responsible for the Chicago Apprenticeship Network, an employer driven initiative designed to create apprenticeship opportunities within organizations across Chicago.
- Richard Wallace is the Founder and Executive Director of Equity and Transformation. He is a diversely talented artist and director with extensive experience developing effective campaigns to engage and empower working-class Chicagoans. His knack for effective coalition building and fundraising lends to a unique ability to align organizational goals with mission, practice, and desire to make a difference.
