Michigan is making WIOA work for immigrants

Immigrant and refugee job seekers are often eligible for public workforce services – and Michigan is breaking new ground in making sure immigrants and refugees have access to critical WIOA Title I services when they're looking for work.

The Michigan Talent Investment Agency and Michigan Office for New Americans are collaborating with frontline staff at workforce agencies so the state can better help eligible immigrants and refugees get trained, find employment, and contribute to the state's economy.

Check out our latest blog post to see how Michigan is making WIOA work for immigrants, as well as their desk-ready checklist and training guide that could be a model for other states.
