Every worker. Every industry. A strong economy.

New report on foundational skills in the service sector

Our newest report examines issues facing service-sector workers with limited foundational skills and strategies for helping these workers upskill and achieve economic mobility.

Foundational Skills in the Service Sector is based on analysis of data known as the PIAAC, focusing on currently-employed workers in retail, hospitality, and healthcare. The report includes examples of how employers are helping their workers build literacy, numeracy, and technology-related skills. It also includes recommendations for state and federal policymakers about how to support adult education and workplace learning opportunities for these workers.
