

#SkillsSummit2019 – our biggest and best Skills Summit ever!

Thank you for being a part of our biggest and best Skills Summit ever! It was so energizing to be surrounded by nearly 500 skills advocates – my phone was buzzing into the night with all the #SkillsSummit2019 action on social media.

If you were inspired as we are by our plenary on new public opinion research – and the finding that 93% of voters support more investments in skills and technical training - we'll be emailing you soon to invite you to a webinar in early March where we'll walk you through the most important topline, the nitty-gritty details, and how you can use our data points and other findings in your own advocacy. Preview: there's a data point in our polling to support each and every proposed policy in our Skills for Good Jobs Agenda!

The conversation I moderated on the future of work and the uneven prospects facing different workers was actually the very first in NSC's There's More than One Future of Work series. Our next future of work event is on Thursday, February 28 at 9:00 AM ET. You can join this and other upcoming future of work discussions via livestream on our Facebook page – if you don't want to miss it – “like” our page. You can also see them in person, if you're local to Washington, D.C. – just register here.

Visit our blog for the full wrap-up on the Summit. And you can download photos of your state delegation from our Flickr page.

I'm looking forward to working with each and every one of you to advance our skills agenda in 2019 – and beyond.

CEO

P.S. – If you want to bookmark your calendar, #SkillsSummit2020 will be held Feb 3-5 at the Omni Shoreham Hotel in Washington, D.C.
