Upskilling Adult Learners with Disabilities: How State Policy Can Support Collaboration between Adult Education, Vocational Rehabilitation, and Workforce Development Partners

Many businesses in the United States are facing a tight labor market and a growing need for skilled workers. At the same time, millions of U.S. adults have foundational skills gaps in areas such as literacy or numeracy - this is especially true among Americans with disabilities. Ensuring that people have access to skill-building opportunities, including resources necessary to address their disabilities, will improve their career prospects and earnings.

Join NSC on Tuesday, February 12 at 2pm ET for a webinar focusing on how closer collaboration among adult education, workforce development, and vocational rehabilitation partners can advance effective practices and programs for workers with foundational skill needs and disabilities. In this webinar, hear from leaders in the Rural Capital region outside Austin, Texas about their experience bringing adult education, vocational rehabilitation, and workforce system stakeholders together to improve policies and practices.
