Making the Perkins Act work better for students and employers

National Skills Coalition has sent a letter to the Senate HELP committee, proposing several ways to make the Perkins Act work better for students and employers in today's economy. The Perkins Act is the nation's primary law supporting career and technical education – but it hasn't been updated in a decade. You can read the letter and our full set of recommendations on our blog.

We've got word that the Senate HELP Committee might consider a Perkins Act reauthorization bill next week. Stay tuned for developments – NSC may call on you next week to take action on this important piece of legislation.
